3rd December 2018

Dear Colleague,

Please find enclosed information on the University of Birmingham/NASSEA Bilingualism in Education programme. This well-established and successful programme, devised by the University of Birmingham and adapted by NASSEA, has been running successfully for seventeen academic years and is open to teachers, and to other education staff with a bachelor's degree, for the next academic year, 2019–20. The programme is aimed at specialist teachers of English as an Additional Language (EAL) and will also be relevant to other staff working with children and young people learning EAL.

NASSEA and the University of Birmingham formed one of the consortia to which the DfES awarded funding for 2004-5 and 2005-6 for a national pilot programme of professional development for specialist teachers of EAL. The DfES pilot aimed to 'enhance the role of the specialist so that they can use their expertise to develop more effective partnerships with classroom teachers, to provide expert advice and lead whole school training.'

NASSEA also made successful applications to the Teacher Development Agency (TDA) for funding for 2005-2008 and 2008-11 to help support this accredited post-graduate EAL programme. For 2011-20 the programme is being supported by NASSEA to enable students to access the programme at a more affordable price.

Key information:

  - Postgraduate Certificate in Bilingualism in Education (1 year)
  - Postgraduate Diploma in Bilingualism in Education (2 years)

A national accredited qualification in EAL is an important development in our field. NASSEA and the University of Birmingham aim to support and further develop this programme, which gives teachers in our field the opportunity to increase their expertise and gain a fully accredited specialist post-graduate qualification.

I look forward to hearing from you.

Yours faithfully
